

The Burial of the Beautiful
Robe the beautiful for the tomb—
While yet the sun is shining,
She has passed away in budding bloom,
In vestal white array her.
One single anemone we crave,
Before her face we cover;
Why should the cold and grasping grave
Take all from those who love her?

Bear the beautiful to the tomb,
Beneath the weeping willow,
Ere the shadows evening gloom
Denote the day's declining.
Bear her softly and slowly on—
Dutiful no placed features;
Dewy the sleep she has fallen upon,
The last of a mortal creature.

Lay the beautiful in the tomb,
Beneath the weeping willow,
Let the maiden have sleeping room,
And softly spread her pillow.
Angels hasten from realms of bliss,
Their watch above her keepings;
Dear to the heart of the Father is
The place where a child is sleeping.

Leave the beautiful in the tomb;
There may be others fairer;
Hanger heads may wear a plume
With glory to the wearer,
But so beautiful and so good—
Think they who dearly held her—
Earth in its loveliest sisterhood
May never have excelled her.

No Time to Swap.—An Indiana man was traveling down the Ohio on a steamer, with a mare and a two-year-old colt, when, by a sudden career of the boat, all three were tilted into the river. The Hoosier, as he rose, puffing and blowing above water, caught hold of the tail of the colt, not having a doubt but that the natural instinct of the animal would carry him safe ashore. The old mare took a bee line for the shore, but the frightened colt swam hastily down the current, with the owner still hanging fast.

Let go of the colt and hang to the o'd mare! shouted his friend.
Phoo! spluttered the Hoosier, spouting the water from his mouth and shaking his head like a Newfoundland dog. "It's mighty fine your telling me to let go the colt; but to a man that can't swim, this ain't exactly the time for swapping horses!"

KISSING THE HANDSOMEST GIRL.—A distinguished candidate for an office of high trust in a certain State, who is "up to a thing or two," and has a keen appreciation of life, when about to set off on an electioneering tour, recently said to his wife, who was to accompany him for prudential reasons: "My dear, inasmuch as this election is complicated, and the canvass will be close, I am anxious to leave nothing undone that would promote my popularity, and so I have thought it would be a good plan for me to kiss a number of the handsomest girls in every place where I may be honored with a public reception. Don't you think it would be a good idea?"

"Capital!" exclaimed the devoted wife, "and to make your election a sure thing, while you are kissing the handsomest girls, I will kiss an equal number of the handsomest young men!"

The distinguished candidate, we believe, has not since referred to this pleasing means of popularity.
In a fix.—Four boys who were fishing when a violent thunder-storm arose, immediately started home as fast as possible, but had gone but a short distance when there was a vivid flash, followed by a terrific clap of thunder. Struck, as it were, for a moment they stood silent and agast. Then the leader spoke: "Sam can you pray?" "No," Bill, can you pray?" "No," Jack, can you pray?" "No," Nor I either; what in the h—ll shall we do?

"May I be married, Ma?" said a lovely girl of fifteen to her mother the other morning.
"Married!" exclaimed the astonished matron; "what put such an idea into your head?"

"Little Emily here has never seen a wedding, and I would like to amuse the child," replied the obliging sister, with fascinating simplicity.

A clergyman in New Hampshire was noted for his long sermons and somewhat indolent habits.
How is it, said a man to his neighbor that Parson W., the laziest man living, writes those interminable long sermons?

Why said the other, "he probably gets to writing and is too lazy to stop."

Mother, said a little fellow the other day, is there any harm in breaking egg shells? Certainly not my dear; but why do you ask? Because I dropped the basket just now, and see what a muss I'm in with the yolks."

For men to resolve to be of no religion till all are agreed in one, is just as wise and as rational as if they should determine not to go to dinner till all the clocks in town strike together.
